THE NAXALITE MOVEMENT

- ‘People’s War’ started in 1967 by a breakaway from CPI-M
- India’s “greatest internal security threat” – ex-PM
- Part of a much longer history of Adivasi resistance
- Red-tagging of trade union organisers, academics, human rights activists as ‘urban Naxals’
e.g. Prof G N Saibaba, Punjab farmer’s movement organisers
- Genocidal displacement and human rights abuses of Adivasi populations (for mining interests)
- Fake encounters
- Documentary film – Red Ant Dream
- Anuradha Ghandy, Charu Majumdar, many others, CPI-Maoist own publications

- Extra-judicial extermination campaign
- Nonviolent activists also being arrested

Statement | India | May 21, 2025 | International solidarity for academics & freedom in India (India India)

International Statement Condemning Escalating State Violence on India's Indigenous Adivasi Communities in Bastar, Chhattisgarh, India

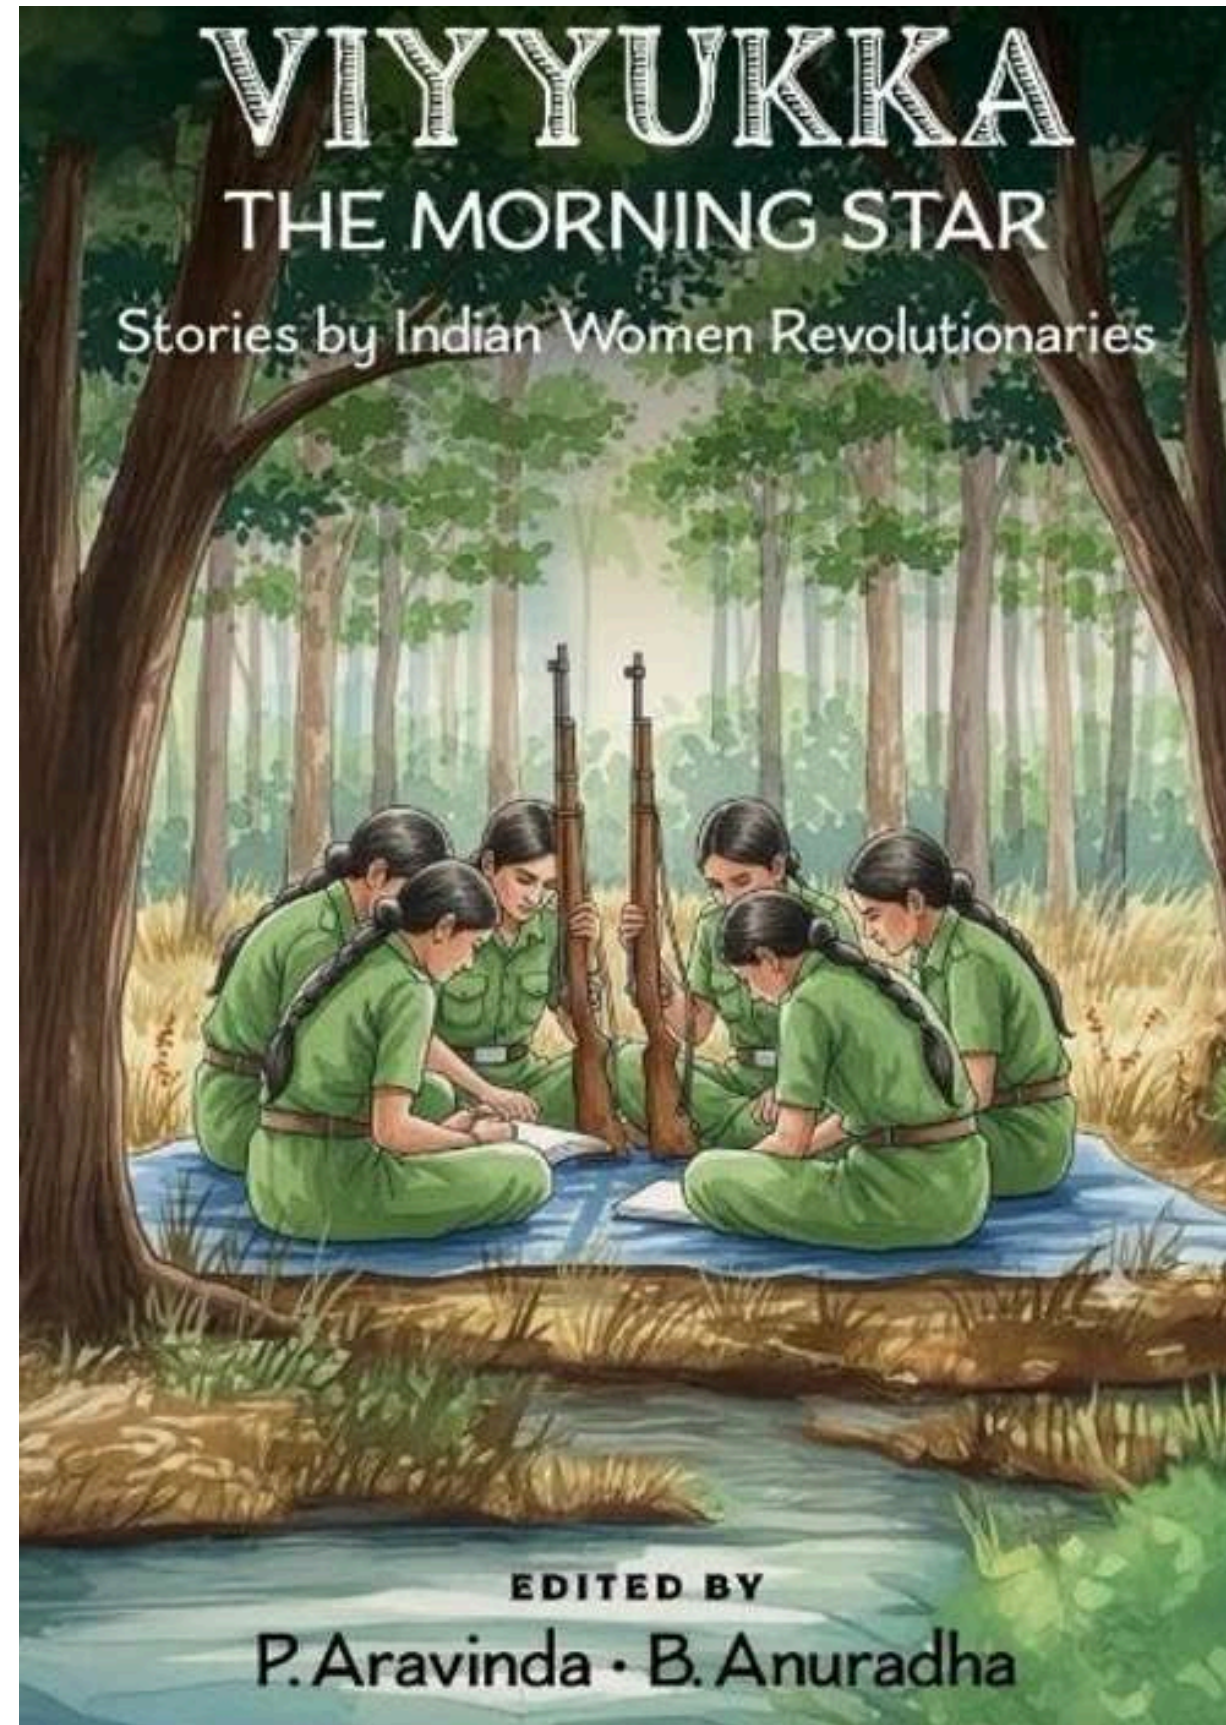

People gathered at the Bastar protest site with a banner defying the state of an indefinite protest from Jan 12, 2023, to Dec 18, 2024, Chhattisgarh, India. Image: Globe Report, 2024

“The Adivasis of Bastar are the custodians of its biodiverse forests and rely on this ecosystem for their subsistence and livelihoods. Their traditional knowledge and cultural heritage have maintained the delicate balance of the region’s ecology. Despite the Constitution recognizing and protecting the rights of the Adivasi community over their land and resources... the Government of India has steadily allowed extractive industries to encroach on Adivasi lands. Profit-driven mining enterprises under public-private partnerships and the garb of development has met with stiff local resistance from the Adivasi people.”

Foreword

Written by P Aravinda & B Anuradha

'Viyukka', a word in Gondi language meaning morning star, is an anthology of stories written in Telugu by Maoist women revolutionaries over the past four decades. Some of these women were martyred in the cause of the revolution, while some are still continuing

“Run! The Police are coming! Run!”

The entire village was alarmed with the news of police coming to their village yet again. Dandakaranya is not new to the police raids. Still, every time the police enter any village, the moment these words fell in the ears of the people, all those who are capable of

THE MORNING STAR

Stories by Indian Women Revolutionaries

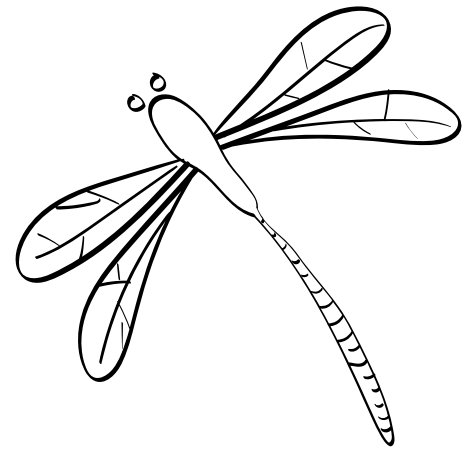

Q&A

Can we cry and weep at the sight of death everyday?
Can we see the world with our eyelids closed?
Autumn is over - spring will bloom.
The ripe fruit is not for corporates.
On tribal rights - who puts their iron feet on them?
Midko is another name for resistance
Anna Midko, Victory belongs to the people
Mother forest, mother forest
Your child Renuka-amma
Has become Midko
Has gone down in History
We grew up listening to those stories.
These are the stories we tell the world.

Tribute to Midko (Anonymous)
